LONDON'S HEALTH OFFICER

Dr. Black Would Brook No Interference and Resigns-Conditions Strongly Favor Republicans at Next Election-Several Names Suggested For Mayor and Other Offices.

By reason of having been elected by ual aggressive action, so when the his fellow members in the court of common council as senior alderman, health officer. he became acting mayor upon retire-ment of Mayor Mahan to become post-master. It was supposed that a spe-cial election would be held to elect a mayor to fill the vacancy but it seems that some screened authority has de-creed otherwise, and the probability is that Alderman Miner will act as mayor until the regular city meeting next was perfectly familiar.

There had been friction between Dr. Black and the then Mayor Mahan, when there were a few cases of the disease reported in New London, several months ago. The doctor then threatened to not only resign but served notice that if certain bills pre-

Acting Mayor Alton T. Miner has announced that he is not to be a candidate for the mayoralty or any other city office, which probably accounts for his independence in action, as hertofore, he, like others in the game, played every point in the political puz-zle for all it was worth, and then some. Knowing the make-up of the doctor and cognizant of his ability as health officer, Mayor Mahan withheld his us-

Acting Mayor Miner was perfectly familiar with the actions of the health officer, of his enforcement of all that pertained to the public health in his own way and regardless of consequences, of his willingness to fight at the drop of the hat, when the slightest question was waited to receive the until the regular city meeting next October. He has had long experience in the court of common council and ought to be familiar with municipal management. Just at the present time he is very much in the public floodlight by reason of his disagreement with Health Officer Black in regard to a case of quarantine for alleged small pox, and of which the acting mayor was perfectly familiar. resignation as health officer, nicely type-written and signed in bold John Hancock style. The time was in New London, when the health of the city was safeguarded by a member of the regular police force detailed to that special duty, working under the di-rection of the city physician when rection of the city physician when contagious disease was reported. Later practicing physicians accepted the office, but acted only when called upon to serve, and then only when directed by the health committee of the court of common council. Not so with Dr. Black. He realized the importance and responsibility of the position and became a real health officer.

Dr. Black has succeeded in bringing the health department to a higher degree of efficiency than ever before, in fact made it one of the most important and systematic of the city de-partments, covering all that pertain-ed to the public health. His worth ed to the public health. His worth and ability is recognized by the whole people, even those who he has offended in doing what he believed to be his duty. Although Mr. Armstrong has retired from active politics, many who trained against him would now be among the leaders to effect his nomination and election.

Ernest E. Rogers entered the political game and was elected alderman as a lieutenant of Mayor Armstrong, with full knowledge of the ability of Mr. Armstrong as he had been associated with him in the Brainard and Armstrong big silk industry for many years. Should Mr. Rogers get the nomination and be elected mayor, the people would be sure of a business administration of the Armstrong quality, with economy as the watchword and extravagance barred.
